

1992

© University of Cambridge

Wolfson Brain Imaging Centre, Cambridge

Grants such as that awarded to establish the Wolfson Brain Imaging Centre, Cambridge, marked an increasing emphasis on biomedical research.

1996

Grant to the Wolfson Institute for Biomedical Research, UCL

A joint grant with the Wolfson Family Charitable Trust of £10 million was awarded to create the Wolfson Institute of Biomedical Research at UCL, which aimed to work at the interface between biological research and its application to both the discovery of new medicines and clinical practice.

example grants

1991

British Academy
Two British Academy Wolfson
Professorships
£529,479

National Railway Museum, York
To improve and extend exhibits
in main hall area
£56,250

Imperial College London
Wolfson Centre for Organic Chemistry
£2,568,000

1992

University of Edinburgh
New Building for Cell and Molecular Biology
£1,920,000

1993

Scottish Office Home & Health Department
Surgical Therapy Unit
(MATTUS) (partly administered through Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh)
£600,000

University of Glasgow
Wolfson Cardiovascular
Medicine Building
£1,500,000

National Gallery
Redevelopment of the North Galleries
£1,000,000

1994

University of Newcastle upon Tyne
Institute for Ageing & Health
£500,000

1995

Imperial War Museum
Holocaust Memorial
Exhibition
£1,000,000